DEDICATION TO DARK SHADOWS

When I was a little boy and school was out, I would run no n-stop from grade school to my home in Monterey. Why? Because, I didn't want to miss an episode of Dark Shadows. Living in a haunted house in Fresno made me very interested in the paranormal. Dark Shadows featured a broad range of paranormal entities and storylines during its original run. Some of the most notable include:

- Vampires: The series gained immense popularity with the introduction of Barnabas Collins, a vampire played by Jonathan Frid. Other vampires appeared throughout the series as well, including some created by Barnabas himself.
- Ghosts: Collinwood, the ancestral home of the Collins family, is notably haunted by a multitude of ghosts, some benevolent and others malicious. Examples include Josette Collins, Sarah Collins, Quentin Collins, and Gerard Stiles.
- Witches and Warlocks: Angelique Bouchard Collins is a powerful witch who placed a curse upon Barnabas, transforming him into a vampire. Warlocks like Nicholas Blair and Judah Zachery also played significant roles.
- Werewolves: Characters like Chris Jennings were featured as werewolves in the series.
- Zombies: Dark Shadows also delved into the realm of the undead, including zombies.
- Man-made monsters: The show explored the creation of artificial life, including characters that could be considered man-made monsters.
- Phoenix: The mythical bird that rises from the ashes of fire and is reborn was depicted through characters and storylines in the show.
- Leviathans: These ancient beings from another dimension also made an appearance, adding to the show's rich lore.
- Satan/Demons: Dark Shadows explored satanic cults and the involvement of demonic entities and Devil-worshipping witches and warlocks.
- Reincarnation: The belief that a soul can be reborn into a new body was explored.

- Time travel and Parallel Worlds: The show featured characters traveling through time and visiting parallel universes, further expanding its supernatural elements.

Dark Shadows' use of a wide range of supernatural creatures and themes, drawing from Gothic horror, folklore, and classic literature, made it a groundbreaking and popular series for its time.

As a young kid, I felt like I was learning about the paranormal through this TV series and books by Brad Steiger and Erich von Danikan. I was on my way to become a paranormal investigator and I didn't know it.

Comments: This book grabs your attention right away with a section called "The Curse of the Lemps". The author points out how it seems like the Kennedy family is cursed, with the spotlight on the unexpected tragic deaths in this family dynasty. From the Kennedy(s) he moves on to the cursed Lemp family in St. Louis, Missouri. The Lemps were of German stock and made their living brewing beer. With the success of brewing beer came the riches! The Lemps were living the life of luxury and then around the corner came the downfall. One death after another, some of the deaths hint at suicide and even murder. What could have brought on this curse? The author reminds us, that with a curse, usually comes a haunting. The Lemp Mansion is reputed as being one of the most haunted establishments in America. Richard Estep reminds us that we should have our true focus on the lives that were lost to this family. Ghost Hunters and Ghost Adventures have investigated this mansion and of course they hyped it up. I have talked with a few paranormal investigators that have been to this mansion, and they tell me that they captured little to no evidence of a haunting, but somehow these TV shows exaggerate the circumstances. These are my thoughts on the matter, not the author's thoughts. The author is factual with the story and with his own investigation.

As I move along with this fascinating book, I get to a story that I am very familiar with. Gef, the Talking Mongoose. If you don't know anything about Gef, I strongly suggest you pick up this book and read about it. A very intriguing case that occurred in 1931. The Irvings who encountered this mongoose, thought it was a weasel. Gef snuck into their home and lived in the walls and ceiling of the home. Gef, was a hyper little mongoose and kept the Irvings awake all night. Gef was such a strange animal. He was actually able to talk. The Irvings first thought he was a spirit and when asked, Gef denied it, then later claimed he was a spirit. Gef was truly a mischievous creature. The story occurs at the Isle of Man. It is documented that Gef was able to speak, sing, steal objects, and even spy on locals. While some believe it was a real paranormal phenomenon, others consider it a hoax or a case of shared delusion.

There is so much paranormal themed information in this book. You even have the story of the Bell Witch. The Bell family dealt with people who believed their story and supported them, while other people ridiculed them and believe they made the whole story up. The Bell Witch story centers around a supernatural entity, often referred to as a "witch," that tormented the Bell family in Adams, Tennessee, from 1817 to 1821. The entity, initially manifesting as strange noises and physical attacks, became known for its ability to speak, hurl insults, and even predict the future. The haunting intensified, particularly targeting John Bell and his daughter Betsy, with claims of physical abuse and the entity eventually taking credit for John Bell's death.

This book is a smorgasbord of paranormal information. Some of the stories that you will find are: The Philip Experiment; The Enfield Poltergeist; Borley Rectory; The R101 Airship; Eastern Airlines Flight 401; Eastern State Penitentiary; Shepton Mallet Prison; Gettysburg Battlefield; The Stanley Hotel; The Sallie House; Alcatraz Island and a WHOLE LOT MORE!

Eastern Airlines Flight 401 is a strange tale. Eastern Airlines Flight 401 was a Lockheed L-1011 that crashed into the Florida Everglades on December 29, 1972, due to a combination of pilot error and a faulty landing gear indicator light. The crash killed 101 people. Some parts from Flight 401 were salvageable and placed on other aircraft. Those aircraft became haunted. The apparitions of Captain Robert 'Bob' Loft and Flight Engineer Don Repo were sometimes seen by the crew members. Their purpose seemed to be a way of warning flight crews when their aircraft was in some kind of danger. The ghosts of Bob and Don were like angels watching over the crew members. Donald 'Don' Repo's face was once reported reflected off an oven and staring at the flight attendant who was operating it.

This book has so much information in it, I suggest that every paranormal enthusiast pick up a copy for your personal library. Learn about the St. Valentine's Day Massacre murder victim that haunted Al Capone. Find out about the pesky little girl ghost that haunts a house in Atchison, Kansas. Ghostly Encounters is paranormal brilliance. What once was dark, will come to the light with this book!

When my stepmother Cindy visited Serbia, she enjoyed the cities of Belgrade, Novi Sad and Nis. Cindy says that Serbia has its share of spooky hotspots with intriguing stories, from ancient fortresses to abandoned hotels and even a mountain rumored to hold hidden Nazi gold. If you are looking for a three-headed demon, all you have to do is head over to the ruins of Trajan's town on Cer mountain. Cindy says that many of the Serbian people believe in this myth. Then we have Avala Mountain near Belgrade where the Vukodlak (werewolf) has been seen. A local named Davor Borjan claims that the Vukodlak clawed his front door, wanting to come in. Avala Mountain is also rumored to have buried Nazi treasure. One of the strangest stories is that in 1987, strange lights were seen at Homolje Mountains and a family was terrorized by 8 Widgets (extraterrestrials). Their 8-year-old son was crying and ran back into the house, yelling that the Widgets were going to get him! These creatures were on the family's roof and peeking through their windows. This incident lasted for about 2 hours and finally the lights went away and there were no more Widgets. Cindy received this information from a local/tourist named Milos Cavic, who knew the family. Cindy asked why they called the space beings "Widgets"? Milos says in broken English: "Is that not you call small people?" Cindy laughed and said: "you must be referring to midgets?" Milos agreed. Milos says that the family told him the creatures were 2 feet tall. Cindy described what the Widgets looked like according to Milos. Please see my crude drawing of a "Widget".

Special Note: The Widget story reminds me of the Kelly-Hopkinsville encounter, which occurred on August 21, 1955, in Kentucky. This Kentucky family was harassed and terrorized by extraterrestrial "goblins". Widgets are described as having a cone shaped hat, 2-feet-tall, vertical slit eyes, razor sharp teeth. See my drawing of a Widget at this link: archive.org/details/528896579-10165530310023572-6804423369069721629-n

Now let's take a look at some of the haunted locations in Serbia.

Trajan's Town on Cer Mountain:
This ancient fortress is said to be inhabited by a mythological creature, Tsar Trajan, a sun-fearing demon with three heads and goat's ears, according to the newspaper Balkan Insight. This story is a local myth and there are no confirmed sightings of this three-headed-demon.

Avala Mountain:
Legends say that Nazi forces hid stolen treasure on Avala Mountain during World War II, making it a site of mystery and potential treasure hunting. Nikola Cerovic, a hunter claims that he spied the Vukodlak (werewolf) in the tree line. Some locals say that on some nights, you can hear the Vukodlak letting out a blood curdling howl. In Slavic folklore, a Vukodlak (also spelled Volkodlak or Wilkołak) is a werewolf-like creature, often described as a monstrous being that embodies both human and animal traits. It's a creature associated with curses, possession, or even divine punishment, transforming into a wolf-like form, particularly during the full moon, and becoming aggressive and dangerous.

Verengaria Hotel (Prodromos):
An abandoned hotel where a newlywed bride allegedly drowned herself in the swimming pool after discovering her husband making love to the maid. Some tourists have heard sobbing and crying. Another tourist saw this ghostly woman looking in the grass, like she lost something. Other locals say her ghost can be seen in the pool at night, according to a Reddit thread.

Skull Tower (Niš):
Skull Tower is a stone structure embedded with human skulls located in Niš, Serbia. It was constructed by the Ottoman Empire following the Battle of Čegar of May 1809, during the First Serbian Uprising. Tourists and locals have felt extreme cold spots. Some people hear disembodied whispering and moaning. One tourist complained that she felt an icy cold hand on the back of her neck.

New Cemetery (Belgrade):
This cemetery, known for its architectural design, is also a place of rich Serbian history and may evoke a sense of the macabre for some. David Henson, an American tourist was visiting the cemetery with his wife. David claims that a ghostly hand came out of the grave and grabbed his wife's ankles. After this happened, they left immediately.

Nis Fortress:
A fortress with a long history of battles and occupations, it is surrounded by monuments and memories of war, which can be seen as a source of unsettling energy. Cindy says that the air is thick with depression and the thickness is so great, you could cut it with a knife. Some people have heard screaming in the background and other people have seen full body apparitions of soldiers.

Homolje Mountains:
This area is known for stories of "Vlach magic" and rituals involving the dead, including potential posthumous marriages and dancing on graves. Vlach magic, also known as "Vlaska Magija", is a form of spiritual practice and folklore associated with the Vlach ethnic minority in eastern Serbia. It incorporates pre-Christian, Paleo-Balkan, and Indo-European elements alongside Orthodox Christian beliefs. Vlach magic is characterized by rituals involving streams, rivers, and forests, and it includes both "white magic" (beneficial) and "black magic" (malicious). The Vukodlak (werewolves) has been spotted in these mountains too. Some people belief that black magic was conducted at the Homolje Mountains and brought on the Vukodlak. It is believed that evil witches and warlocks summoned these werewolf creatures. It is also believed that there have been human sacrifices conducted for the Vukodlak.

Haunted Solomon Islands
Paul Dale Roberts, HPI's Esoteric Detective
Halo Paranormal Investigations

The Solomon Islands have a historic legacy with World War II. The islands were a major battleground during World War II, and the remnants of the war, including unexploded ordnance, continue to pose a threat and are a source of concern. Some may associate these physical reminders of war with a sense of unease or even supernatural presence. Many spirits have been seen moving about in these areas of war. Islanders have heard disembodied screaming. Islanders have also heard the sounds of explosions when there are no explosions occurring. There is a strong residual haunting in certain areas of the islands. The horrors of World War II still haunt the islands and the haunting will probably continue through eternity.

Skull Island is another island that full body apparitions have been seen roaming around. One islander claimed that he saw floating skulls. This island, with its collection of skulls from past headhunting practices, is a site of historical and cultural significance. Many islanders feel sadness, depression and dread when visiting Skull Island. A few islanders felt suicidal while visiting Skull Island. When they left Skull Island, everything went back to feeling normal again. Newspaper articles from the 1940s report that a specific island in the Solomons, called St. George Island, was reportedly abandoned due to local belief that it was haunted, with stories of disappearances and "hoodoo magical practice". An islander that vanished went out to the beach area to fish for his family and never returned to his village. The villagers searched the whole island and never found the fisherman. It was believed he was cursed with nefarious hoodoo magic. Hoodoo practices can be used for both benevolent and malevolent purposes. While often associated with healing, protection, and attracting good fortune, Hoodoo also includes techniques for causing harm, such as curses, hexes, and spells to bring misfortune. The ethical use of Hoodoo, like any spiritual or magical practice, depends on the practitioner's intentions. Islanders say that the missing fisherman was cursed for fishing on part of the island that was controlled by a family that practiced Hoodoo.

On Makira Island, mythology describes a spirit/creature called the Adaro. The Adaro is a ghost of the dead that can inhabit animals, trees, and rocks. There is another Adaro that is considered as a elemental spirit that is associated with forces of nature like the sea or rainbows. The Adaro are said to haunt the seas. Adaros are sometimes described as half-human, half-fish beings with gills and fins. They are sometimes depicted as malevolent, with tales of them attacking fishermen or causing illness and death. Islanders also believe in other non-human spirits inhabiting forests, seas, and skies, some benevolent, some malevolent, and others are capricious in nature. The islanders believe in "vengeful spirits". Some myths describe vengeful spirits, also known as the "Aataro Wasi", that are associated with violent deaths. These spirits are believed to seek revenge by harming humans, though some may transform into protective deities. The Aataro Wasi is known to create rogue waves or extreme storm waves that can sweep a person away into the ocean.

Sometimes the Solomon Islands are visited by the "Night Marchers" that come over from nearby American Samoa. These are spirits of ancient warriors who parade about at night. The Night Marchers are taken seriously by locals. The Night Marchers are described as appearing with torches, drums, and conch shells. Witnesses may also hear rhythmic chanting, stomping feet, and experience a heavy wind, along with bright torches and accompanying mist or fog. A foul, musky or sulfurous smell is sometimes reported. They are said to float a few inches off the ground.

Some protective spirits from World War II have warned certain islanders of unexploded ordnance (UXOs). These physical remnants of war pose a real and dangerous threat, serving as a reminder of the islands' violent past. The protective spirits are usually identified as islander's deceased family members.

SPECIAL NOTE: I flew over Solomon Islands when I was going to Auckland, New Zealand with my stepson Jason Randall Porter and ex-wife Patricia Mary Roberts.

The Haunted Home of Sabrina & Matt
Paul Dale Roberts, HPI's Esoteric Detective
Halo Paranormal Investigations

8/16/2025 SATURDAY
On this night, we have a paranormal investigation in Sacramento, CA. The investigation will take place in a private residence. Let's do a roll call: Paul Dale Roberts - HPI Co-Owner; Deanna Jaxine Stinson - HPI

Co-Owner; Holly DeLaughter - Investigator/Sensitive/Professional Photographer, Donna Reynolds - Investigator; Kristen Sheley - Investigator/Researcher; Justin Kohn - Investigator-in-Training; Shauna Kinchen - Investigator-in-Training.

Equipment being used for this investigation: High 8 Video Camera with Night Vision, EMF readers, Dowsing Rods, several digital audio recorders for EVPs, Kinect, temperature gauges and thermometers, several digital cameras, digital camera with infrared capabilities and flashlights.

We definitely needed flashlights, because this home is located on acres of land. The land according to the occupants is haunted. Holly DeLaughter felt an American Indian presence on this land. This home is out in open field where coyotes linger about. The occupants Matt and Sabrina gave us a briefing on how their children and grandchildren have seen a phantom Army man walking about on their land. One of their grandkids saw what he called a 'bad man' that was walking out in their yard and bathroom. One of the children told Matt that there was a black monster in the chicken pen. Matt tells me that once when he was in the metal shed, there was sounds of heavy footsteps on the roof, when he investigated, there was nobody on the roof. The footsteps continued to run back and forth on the roof. One of their children had a vision that the house was engulfed in flames and the smell of burned wood resonated through the house and smelled by other family members. One family member has seen what she describes as a white shadow person walking by or how a dark shadow creature with no discerning features crossed the living room area. The shadow creature walks on all 4 legs and has been seen a few times by other family members. A picture of Matt's brother who was a paratrooper in the Army was moved from its place on the wall to the opposite end of the wall and no one made claim of moving it. One family member has actually seen the picture move on its own. Matt tells me that his brother was paralyzed from a jump that he made, in which he was trying to do a triple flip in the air. Could this be the phantom Army man in the open fields? I can only wonder.

Matt and Sabrina were very hospitable to the HPI crew and had coffee, Pepsis, cheese, ham, crackers, assorted fruit waiting for us. She was pleased at our professionalism and how we conducted ourselves. As I interviewed Sabrina, she explained to me that her daughter has seen white shadows criss cross areas of one of the bedrooms. Matt has on many occasions seen shadowy figures move about in his home. Matt and Sabrina lived in this home for two years and the paranormal activity started two months from the time they moved in.

I interviewed one of their grandsons and their grandson told me that I should check out the bedroom with the bunk bed in it, because this is where his little brother was terrorized by a dark figure in the room. When I went back in the house, Holly told me in her own words that she felt something in the very room that the boy described with the bunk bed. Holly explains that there is some type of entity that would frighten one of the children. Holly knew nothing of this story, but yet she was telling me the same story as Sabrina's son was telling me. I then told Holly about Sabrina's son's story and Holly was amazed at her own ability. I was amazed too.

Other notes as described in Sabrina's own words:

"The bad man has a gun. Sabrina's son Chance told his mom "He will shoot you, mom" and wants the doors locked to keep the bad man outside.

I have seen a full-bodied shadow person in my room. He stood there for about a minute looking at me while I was looking at him.

There has also been a disembodied voice calling my son's name.

Matt has definitely been touched (tapped on the head) and I had the experience with the "cold spot" that hit my tummy while I was in bed.

I felt a "cat" walking on the bed.

We showed Sabrina's son Chance a picture of Bob, Matt's deceased brother. When we did so there was no hesitation on Chance's part. I asked him if that was the Army man and he immediately said yes. I don't know if it is or not, but we told him that the next time he sees him to say "hi, Bob" and explained to Chance that he was a good guy.

CONCLUSION:
Inconclusive. No EVPs were captured. In some of our photos, there was something that looked like "mist". One investigator suggested it could be ectoplasm. I believe that the 3 photos that have mist in them are due to these factors: 1. smudges or moisture on the lens, 2. condensation inside the lens, or atmospheric conditions like haze or fog. Other factors include lens flare, soft focus, and even heat haze from temperature differences. I do not believe the mist image on the photos is paranormal. There were many ghost stories by the occupants and other family members, but we found no proof of a haunting. I conducted a Roman Catholic house blessing, just in case. After 3 weeks, Sabrina called me and said my house blessing worked. The house blessing may have just been a placebo effect. CASE CLOSED.

Haunted Bangor, Maine
Paul Dale Roberts, HPI's Esoteric Detective
Halo Paranormal Investigations

In 1975, the US Army sent me over to Bangor, Maine for a few days. I took advantage of those few days by visiting Mount Hope Cemetery. Mind you, I wasn't a paranormal investigator yet, but I was really curious about the paranormal, since I grew up in a haunted house in Fresno, CA. I was hoping I would witness some sort of paranormal activity. Unfortunately, I didn't. It was still exciting to be at this historic cemetery. I was told that the ghost of gangster Al Brady haunts the cemetery, and visitors have actually seen the ghost of Al Brady wandering around the cemetery. Some other notable figures at the cemetery are Hannibal Hamlin (Vice President under Lincoln), several Maine governors, and a few Civil War generals. PFC Wayne Johnson, US Army claimed while visiting the cemetery he saw a Civil War soldier riding a ghostly horse. The soldier was riding his horse through the cemetery slowly. The soldier was looking at various graves. Then the soldier and horse vanished.

Bangor, Maine, is known for its spooky reputation, largely due to its association with author Stephen King and its historical sites. Several other locations are rumored to be haunted, including the Charles Inn and the Lucerne Inn. Let's look at some of these scary sites, starting with Mount Hope Cemetery.

Mount Hope Cemetery:
This large, historic cemetery is a popular spot for ghost hunters and is featured in several of Stephen King's works. Visitors have reported hearing footsteps, feeling cold spots, and experiencing other unexplained phenomena. Many visitors have reported seeing ghostly figures, unexplained shadows, and other spectral appearances. Some have heard the voices of children, adding to the eerie atmosphere. Stephen King, who lived in Bangor, frequently visited Mount Hope Cemetery for inspiration. He even used names from headstones in his stories, including the novel "Pet Sematary," which was partly filmed at the cemetery.

Charles Inn:
Located in downtown Bangor, this hotel is known for its ghostly activity and reports of paranormal occurrences by both staff and guests. The ghostly activity seems to dominate the fourth floor. Owners and guests have experienced strange occurrences, including unexplained noises, moving objects, and full body apparitions. Specifically, a young girl and a man in a top hat known at Lassie & Top Hat are said to be seen roaming the halls, and guests have reported cold spots, knocking, and even electrical disturbances. Guests and staff have reported hearing strange voices, giggling, and knocking sounds, especially on the fourth floor. Owners have witnessed wine glasses flying across the room, suggesting the presence of unseen forces. Several reports mention sudden drops in temperature, indicating potential paranormal presence. Some guests have experienced electrical issues, like lights flickering or appliances malfunctioning, which could be linked to paranormal activity. Guests have also reported hearing someone jiggling their door handle and experiencing squeaking floors.

Lucerne Inn:
The Lucerne Inn in Bangor, Maine, is rumored to be haunted by the ghosts of a bride and groom, with the story stemming from a tragic incident involving a caretaker named Nathan and his wife. According to the legend, Nathan discovered his wife with another man and, in a fit of rage, murdered both of them. The ghosts of the couple are said to linger, potentially as residual spirits tied to the emotional event. The Inn, particularly the room where the incident occurred, is now believed to be haunted by the couple's spirits. Some believe the ghosts are a residual haunting, meaning they are echoes of the past, replaying the violent event rather than actively interacting with the living, according to Maine Ghost Hunters. The ghosts mentioned have several nicknames. They are called "The Bride and Groom", "The Caretaker" and "The Woman in White".

Fort Knox:
While technically in Prospect, Maine, this 19th-century fort is close enough to Bangor to be included in my list. It's a popular destination for paranormal investigators. Leopold Hagy, the fort's former caretaker is said to make his rounds, appearing as a shadowy figure. Then there is Mike, a construction worker who died after igniting black powder while smoking, is said to haunt the area where the accident occurred. If you visit Fort Knox and come across a young ghostly girl, her name is Elizabeth. Elizabeth is a young girl who lived on the land before the fort was built is said to play with toys left by investigators, and some have reported feeling her touch. People hear disembodied voices, heavy breathing, footsteps, and doors slamming. EMF meters have also detected unusual electromagnetic fields in areas with no electricity, and some have reported feeling cool breezes in rooms where the rest of the space is warm.

Stephen King's House:
While not explicitly described as haunted, the iconic and gothic-looking house belonging to the famous horror author has a distinct creepy aesthetic that fits right in with a haunted visit. Its wrought iron fence adorned with bats and other spooky details, along with its association with King's unsettling stories, makes it a popular stop for those seeking a thrill. Remember, it's a private residence, so admire from a distance. There are rumors that Stephen King has purchased some haunted items and has them as decor around the inside of his home. The haunted items have invited various spirits to his home. People claim that they have seen floating mist in front of Stephen King's home. The mist could possibly be ghosts according to ghost hunter Lance Darneck of Boston, Massachusetts.

James is calling for his friend Ivan Schumter. If you call Ivan directly, he will not pick up if he does not recognize the number, so you have to call James first. Ivan has lived in his home for 40 years, he owns the home. About a month 1/2 ago, Ivan has been terrorized by what he believes to be a poltergeist. He has felt what feels like vice grips on his toes and feet. His legs get pinched constantly. He is losing a lot of sleep. The entity follows Ivan everywhere, from his house, to his truck and even went 200 miles to Trinity with Ivan in his truck. The entity was pushing on the gas pedal trying to make Ivan crash his truck. I gave James information on how to conduct a Roman Catholic house blessing and suggested that he should get a full submersion baptism (a basic form of exorcism, in case it is an attachment). I would usually do this, but been so busy with my podcasting. Justin, if Zak and the crew except this case, I will require a finder's fee of $500.00. If you agree to this, I will provide you with James' phone number. Best, Paul Dale Roberts

The Werewolves of Ossory
Paul Dale Roberts, HPI's Esoteric Detective
Halo Paranormal Investigations

I went to Ireland with my son Jason and ex-wife Patricia. We did everything tourists would do, like kissing the Blarney Stone, visiting Dublin Castle and taking a tour of the Guinness Storehouse. On one of our days in Ireland, we took a train to Newry, Northern Ireland just to relax and have some Irish coffee and a scone. There was one day we had marked out. A visit to Kilkenny, so we could investigate the "werewolves of Ossory". We took a direct train to Kilkenny from Dublin. We departed from Dublin Heuston Station and arrived at Kilkenny MacDonagh Station. From the station it was a 14-minute walk to Kilkenny Castle. The castle tour guide said that the werewolves of Ossory have been seen many times by locals, tourists, hikers, etc.

The story of the werewolves of Ossory originated from medieval Irish, English, and Norse legends. Locals say that the werewolves descended from the legendary warrior Laignech Fáelad. Laignech was able to transform into a wolf. A well-known story by Gerald of Wales tells of a noble Ossory family that was cursed. The family would transform into wolves every seven years. Legend has it that 2 family members transformed into werewolves and slaughtered a traveling priest and a newlywed couple. Some of the people we talked to, said that the story is hogwash and believe that the legends may stem from the military practices of ancient Irish warriors who adopted wolf-like characteristics.

The Werewolves of Ossory may be connected to Laignech Fáelad. Locals believe there is a strong bloodline from Laignech to the werewolves. Laignech is an ancestor to the kings of Ossory. The legend of werewolves might have been inspired by ancient Irish warriors, known as luchthonn (wolf-skins), who would wear wolf pelts or adopt wolf-like hairstyles and go on raids, an activity known as "going wolfing". What is interesting is that some locals claim that on certain nights, ghostly figures of men wearing wolf skins lurk through the bushes. Rylee Gallagher of Cork, Ireland encountered a ghostly figure wearing a wolf skin. The wolf skin wearing ghost stood in front of Rylee, smiled and then vanished.

A detailed account was written by the 12th-century royal clerk Gerald of Wales. It features a travelling priest encountering a speaking wolf in the forest of Ossory. The wolf, a man from Ossory, explains that he and his partner were cursed to transform into wolves every seven years. After the seven years, one pair would return home and be replaced by another. In Gerald's account, the curse was a punishment from God or Satan for the wickedness of the people of Ossory. The priest gives the dying wolf-woman communion, revealing a human body underneath her skin, highlighting the inherent humanity within the wolf form. In the medieval period, being a werewolf was often seen as a curse from God or Satan and a sign of sin, with wolves representing greed, lust, and deception. Some versions of Irish folklore suggest werewolves were also protective of children, going to great lengths to keep them safe from harm. Ireland was once a densely wooded country with an abundant of wolves. Then there were bounties placed on them during the 1650s, until the last wolf was killed in County Carlow in 1786. Brayden Doherty of Belfast, Ireland says that there may not be any living wolves around, but there is definitely the spirits of wolves that haunt Ossory. Brayden says on certain nights, you can hear the wolf spirits howl into the night.

4th and T Night Walker
Paul Dale Roberts, HPI's Esoteric Detective
Halo Paranormal Investigations

8/29/2025: About 4 months ago, I received a call on the paranormal hotline. The caller's name is Mark. Mark would not provide his last name, for fear of being ridiculed with his story. Mark says he was visiting a friend near 4th and T in Sacramento. 4th and T had a legendary past reputation. That reputation and complex history centers on being a former Portuguese neighborhood and a former red-light district in the 70s. It's now the vibrant Lavender Heights neighborhood, known for its history of LGBTQ+ activism and its status as a safe and welcoming community.

Today, the area is celebrated for its diversity and is a hub for local culture, restaurants, and businesses. In the 70s, 4th and T was known as the "prostitute's stroll". There were prostitutes and pimps around every corner of 4th and T. Cars stopping all over the place, so Johns could talk to the ladies of the night. Mark says that the times he has visited his friend on 4th and T, there is a strong odor of marijuana, when there is no one around. I explained to Mark that the smell of marijuana can carry for a long distance, and I would not consider that as a paranormal experience. Mark says that he has been touched by ghostly female hands while walking to his car, but the thing that creeps him out, is that he will hear the sounds of high-heels hitting pavement. The footsteps are very loud and when Mark turns around, there is no one there. This has happened to Mark 3 times, and he calls the ghostly lady "the Night Walker". When the 4th and T Night Walker, walks past Mark, he can feel a very cold breeze. The last time that Mark encountered the 4th and T Night Walker, he actually saw the ghostly woman's eyes. Mark could not see the body of the ghost, he could only see the eyes, as the ghost passed him by. Mark says..."she stared right at me, I am too scared to go back to 4th and T and told my friend, he needs to visit me, instead of me visiting him. I feel the next time, something bad is going to happen."

Mark wants me to bless the neighborhood. I know that the area is haunted, because 2 years ago, I investigated 4th and T with 2 investigators. I managed to capture two EVPs, one that was a female voice that said.."do you date?" One of my investigators named Chantel, captured a male voice that said.."where are you going?" On 8/26/2025, I received a call from Jeremy who was hanging out with friends at Southside Park, which is very near 4th and T. Jeremy heard some strange clicking sounds that seemed to be coming from all over the place. The sun was going down and Jeremy and his friends were throwing a frisbee. Everything seemed okay, then 2 of Jeremy's friends said they saw odd moving shadows against the trees. Jeremy who is familiar with ghost hunting shows, turned on the recorder on his smart phone to see if he could capture any EVPs. They were unsuccessful, but did hear with their ears, some disembodied whispering. At one point of the night, they heard a full-on conversation between two men and there were no other men around. As Jeremy's friend was taking pictures of some strange blue orbs, a tree branch fell in front of him, almost hitting him. Jeremy and his friends saw 2 human shaped shadows that were moving about. That was enough for Jeremy and his friends, and they immediately went back to the car and took off.

After I received Jeremy's call, I discovered through my research that the area saw significant community activism, particularly through the work of groups like those led by activist Marie Balshor, to clean up the neighborhood and drive out dangerous elements like pimps and drug dealers. They may have cleaned up the neighborhood, but it appears that the ghosts of yesterday still linger around the neighborhood.

This negative energy of the past could be residual or possibly intelligent. When Mark says the eyes were staring at him, that sounds like possible intelligent energy. The 4th and T Night Walker may be a ghost that died in a terrible way and because of that, cannot rest. If I get more reports of spiritual activity at the park and at 4th and T, I will consider blessing the areas. If you or anyone you might know that has experienced activity in these two locations, please let me know, by emailing me at: jazmaonline@gmail.com

Haunted Eltz Castle
Paul Dale Roberts, HPI's Esoteric Detective
Halo Paranormal Investigations

PAUL'S EBOOKS:
jazmaonline.boards.net/thread/3222/pauls-books

Eltz Castle (Burg Eltz) is said to be haunted, particularly by the spirit of Countess Agnes, who died defending the castle after rejecting an unwelcome suitor. Her story and the presence of her armor in the Countess Room contribute to the castle's reputation for being a "thin place" where paranormal activity is experienced. Elsa Hoffman when visiting the castle was approached by the full body apparition of Countess Agnes. The Countess walked up to Elsa and looked her straight in the eye. Elsa said her eyes were filled with sorrow. Elsa felt no fear from the apparition. The Countess gently grabbed Elsa's hand and held it for a very short while. The Countess gave a brief smile to Elsa and then faded away.

The castle was founded in a region that was an important trade route between rich farmlands and their markets in the Roman period. With the collapse of the Western Roman Empire in the late 5th Century AD, the area was conquered by the Franks. At times tourists hear the sounds of battle in the nearby fields. With land captured by Charlemagne's empire, it went to his son Louis the Pious. It was during this period that the site was occupied by a simple manor hall with an earthen palisade. Several hundred years later, House of Eltz began work on the Platteltz, a Romanesque keep, which was built on the site of the old manor hall. This remains the oldest part of the castle. In this area, tourists feel like they are being watched. Some tourists have said they have been touched or heard whispering voices when no one was around. Adelbrecht Meyer from Crailsheim says he has seen the spirits of Roman soldiers, and he learned that in 1157 the fortress was an important part of the Holy Roman Empire under Frederick Barbarossa. It continued to protect the trade routes from the Moselle Valley and the Eifel region. Adelbrecht mentioned that at times, you can hear the shuffling of feet and sounds of marching coming from the oldest part of the castle.

Between 1331–1336, the castle endured the only serious military conflicts in its history during the Eltz Feud when lords in the region including Johann of Eltz, together with free imperial knights, opposed the territorial policies of Balduin von Trier who was the Elector and Prince-Archbishop of Trier. As a result of the standoff, Balduin lay siege to Johann at Eltz Castle. It was bombarded by primitive cannons known as Pot-de-fer and catapults from a small siege castle, Trutzeltz Castle, which was built on a rocky outcrop on the hillside above the castle (the remains can still be seen today as a few ruined walls on the northern side of the castle). The siege of Eltz ended after two years when the free imperial knights agreed to accept the laws and sovereignty of Trier. Archbishop Balduin reinstated Johann to the Burgrave, but only as his vassal and no longer as a free knight. Clara Weber and her friend Johanna Muller have visited the castle several times. Clara has heard the distant sounds of battle. Johanna on the other hand has witnessed warrior apparitions appearing on the grounds of the castle. Some of the ghostly warriors appear to be in conflict. Johanna says that the apparitions appear quickly and disappear quickly.

A very strange incident occurred when Felix Schmidt, a visitor to the castle saw what looked like a man lying on the castle grounds. The figuration was all black and in the shape of a large man. As Felix approached the figure, he could then see it was a gathering of Carrion Crows. As the crows departed, for a quick second, they were still in the shape of a large man, until they finally scattered and flew off.

Countess Agnes was a strong-willed woman. She was the daughter of the 15th Count of Eltz. Her spirited nature and interest in knightly pursuits was known throughout the castle. There was something about those knights that would catch the Countess' eye. Then came an unwanted suitor. She was promised in marriage to the Knight of Braunsberg, but she did not find him to her liking and rejected his proposal. In a fit of rage, Braunsberg returned with an army and stormed the castle. Agnes, clad in armor, took to the defense and was killed in battle by Braunsberg, who did not recognize her. Her regretful attacker fled, and the spirit of Agnes is said to remain in the castle, with her room and belongings, including her armor, said to be a focal point for hauntings. Visitors and staff have reported a strange presence being felt in the Countess Room. Then there is another ghost named "Little Peter" who roams the halls, while others cite technical disturbances during shows as a sign of the castle's ghostly inhabitants. Conrad Adler, a tourist from Mannheim encountered Little Peter. Little Peter appeared in front of Conrad and laughed at him and pointed to his nose. Little Peter then disappeared. Conrad went to the restroom only to discover that he had a pimple at the edge of his nose. Conrad believes that Little Peter was laughing at this inflamed red bump at the tip of his nose. Sophia Schulz, a former employee says that the veil is thin at this castle. It's not surprising that so many people who visit the castle, will have witnessed the paranormal.

EVERYTHING BELOW ARE STORIES FROM PAST INVESTIGATIONS

Subject: A Dimensional Rift for Ghosts, UFOs, Shadow People, Little People and Bigfoot QUOTE
Sat Jan 26, 2008 2:27 pm

Today is December 15, 2007, Saturday. I am meeting a group of paranormal investigators/ufologists/cryptozoologists/scouts/occult pioneers at Starbucks on 15th and Broadway in Sacramento and more investigators at Paradise Juice and Coffee Bar in Willits. This group by name are: Michele Stump, Robin Kanstein, Bryan Coleman, Angel Kesti, Donna Reynolds, Holly DeLaughter, Chris Grissom, Nicole Pollard-Wilburn and of course me, I am the lead investigator and scoutmaster of this scouting mission to Covelo. Holly and Nicole are our guides, since they have lived in Covelo for quite sometime and know the ins and outs of this town.

Holly and Nicole are the first ones that told me about haunted Covelo and Michelle Stump, Researcher came up with this information, these are her words from an email:

"I did some research on the Round Valley Wars, Mendocino County investigation. I believe that this place could definitely be haunted. It has a very bloody history.

Then I received this email from Holly DeLaughter:

"The small, lonely but luscious town of Covelo is situated in Northeastern Mendocino County and is one of the most beautiful places in California. It is also one of the most heavily imprinted and is considered haunted due to its very sad, tragic history. Also known as the Nome Cult Farm, Round Valley Indian Reservation and Camp Wright, the valley and its surrounding mountains, lakes, rivers and streams were traditional homelands of the Yuki, Wailaki, Huchnom, Lassik, and other Indian tribes dating back to the late B.C. period. It was in the early to mid 1800's, Anglo-American settlers and the United States Government came marching in. The results were some of the most horrific in the State of California's history.

Link to history can be found here: http://www.covelo.net/tribes/pages/tribes_history.shtml
Forced relocation of California's Indians/Nome Cult Walk (were marched here!): http://www.covelo.net/tribes/pages/nomecult/tribes_nome_cult_history.shtml"

I first came to the valley in 1997 to visit my parents after they relocated to Covelo from Sacramento. My dad took a job as a school teacher at the local charter school. I cannot describe to you the utter pain and sorrow I felt from the land upon arrival, despite its optic brilliance. Being so empathic I found it virtually impossible to tread lightly, as there was so much heaviness everywhere. I owe much of my spiritual enlightenment to the truth of this land and would like to invite you to come adventure with me. Come scout it out! Bigfoot lives here and is referred to as the Wild Man of the Woods. I have seen this species myself and have a report on file with the BFRO, along with many others (google Covelo and Bigfoot). There are also what the elders refer to as Little People who roam the hills and hollows at night. Then there is also Shadow people. There are UFO sightings galore! There's not a single inch of this valley that's not anciently occupied with spirits leading the way. I have lost time on Hwy 162 with a witness in my car, slipped into another dimension where everything was surreal and buzzing (Paul: This sounds like Holly is referring to the Oz Factor, which abductees feel the same thing Holly is feeling). No, I wasn't stoned! I channeled a Navaho spirit, followed another to a remote location where I captured an apparition with my camera, and on it goes..

There's all kinds of paranormal phenomena in these Northern California wilds.. Cool thing is, what much of the world calls paranormal is really pretty normal here! After a decade of comings and goings… I myself have come to the conclusion this land ties into the Vortex of Shasta, expanding on (sharing) Her Majesty's powerful energy grid, heartily seasoned by its own unique energy, of course. For those who care to venture, you're in for a real treat! Bring lots of equipment and please dress warm.

Pertinent highly recommended reading material (unfortunately out of print but obtainable for a steep price online): Genocide and Vendetta: The Round Valley Wars of Northern California by Lynwood Carranco and Estle Beard. Very good book!"

This is what I know. In 1854 European settlers entered this valley. Legend has it, that when the Yuki Indians saw the first white man, they gathered around his horse, happy to greet this new stranger. The stranger pointed a stick at one of the Indians and the Indian fell dead. The Indians then associated the white man as being a devil. The first governor of California allowed genocide to take place against the Indians and over 5,000 Indians died. When finally a proclamation law came into effect, protecting the Indians, the Indians (men, women and children) became slaves for the white man. So many Indians died, that a creek called Bloody Run Creek actually ran red with Indian blood. The Round Valley Wars was a slaughterhouse of Indians being massacred in these open fields. It is rumored that strong residual haunting activity still takes places on these open killing fields.

As my team of investigators arrived at Paradise Juice and Coffee Bar in Willits to meet our guides Holly and Nicole, everyone was overjoyed to see Holly and Nicole again. Some of the investigators worked with Holly and Nicole on the Mount Shasta scouting mission. It was a nice reunion! Nicole made sure I had a green wheat shot, that tasted like grass and would give me an energy boost! Holly & Nicole gives a briefing to our HPI Covelo task force and tells us what to expect. We all convoy to Covelo and follow Holly up the steep winding roads. On this day we are paranormal pioneer investigators, because this is the first time a paranormal investigating group has officially investigated Covelo. Shannon 'Ms. Macabre' stays in constant communication with Chris and I, on the development of this mission. With any new findings, I kept Shannon, our president fully informed. I did a count on our equipment for this mission.

We had 2 walkie talkies, 5 digital cameras, 1 video camera, 4 audio digital recorders, 4 Listen Up Sound Enhancers, 3 EMF Readers, 3 pen laser lights, 1 temperature gauge, 4 flashlights, plastic analysis bags (for Bigfoot evidence), 3 dowsing rods, 3 pendulums, 1 set of binoculars, 1 telephoto lens, 9 cellular phones. Bryan Coleman which will be working with Shannon on a possible documentary was there to video tape this event. Bryan drove all the way up here from Santa Cruz, I enjoyed watching his professionalism as he handled his video camera and interviewed some of the main players of this scouting expedition.

First Stop/Makeshift Grave of Mason Riley: Our first stop was at a makeshift grave on the side of the road honoring Mason Riley, in which a truck he was a passenger in went over a cliff. Holly and Nicole were very close to the family of this tragedy. We paid our tributes to Mason and his family.

Second Stop/Whiteman's Cemetery: Angie 'Auj' Joaquin, a native American Indian and our guide through this cemetery briefed us on how her family has lived in this valley for 70 years. She explained how 7 tribes were driven from their lands from Ukiah and the Sacramento Valley to Covelo. She discussed Bloody Run Trail and how Indians were forced into boarding schools. She tells us how she lost many of her family members due to the conflict with the white settlers of this region. She explains because of all the tragedy, there is a lot of residual haunting activity here. Then there is Hatchet Mountain. Nicole says: "Hatchet Mountain has no actual hatchet buried up there, Its part of a Native burial ground, and the way that the snow never holds over it, its in the shape of a hatchet that occupies the entire front side of the mountain! So when it snows it outlines the grounds to expose the enormous hatchet." Angie tells us she has Wylaiki and Nomalaki blood in her. Her story is very sad and we listened to the many tragic tales of this land and its inhabitants. Bryan captures her briefing on video.

Third Stop/Pine Grove Indian Cemetery: Many of Angie's family members are buried here. She talks of the Nomalaki Indians and she discusses some of the paranormal activity of this land. She says that a black goblin has been seen, that has claws and a tail. She says that this goblin looks almost like a gargoyle with broken wings. A dead goblin was once found by the Indians and its disappearance after being found is a mystery, it was rumored that the Indians of this land burned it. What is interesting Whitley Streiber in his book 'Communion' describes a goblin type of creature that works alongside the 'grays'. The goblin type of creature that Whitley describes is dark blue, with no wings. The goblin is short and has the face of a gargoyle, almost similar to what Angie is describing. Angie says that the goblin that has been seen here has glass-like skin as dark as coal and a big nose. Auj said the one that was found dead was wrapped in a yellow shaw type thing. The one that she has seen entering homes has never been seen wearing any article of clothing. Another entity that is seen here is a shadow woman that has holes for her eyes, mouth and nose, she wears a white dress. At times people hear distant warpath drums beating and a woman crying.

Fourth Stop/North Fork Lounge: We all stop to eat, we are starved! I gobble down some spaghetti and listen to the stories of two guests at our table named Sherry D. Moore and Linda Lohne. Both ladies have some interesting stories. They talk about Irmulco - Redwood Creek - Flat Meadow where Sherry witnessed hundreds of different colored lights in the open fields. The lights danced in the field and it reminded her of fairies or leprechauns. She talks about a huge UFO that was seen in this area, the size of a football field and it was oval in shape. She says that there were lights on the top of it. She once has a whirling rainbow portal that opened up near her bedroom, she talks about the Bigfoot sightings in this area. Linda Lohne talks about her little boy that had an invisible playmate named Georgie and the strange occurrences that would happen when Georgie was around. Sherry and Linda hang out with us after dinner and watch us proceed to investigate other places in Covelo. Nicole had me laughing, she calls all men and women 'dude' and she has a cute saying, when she is ready to go to another location, she will say..."let's mob over to that house!" Mob means 'to go'. Before I knew it she has me saying mob this and mob that.

Fifth Stop/Bigfoot Sighting Location: This is where Holly witnessed a Bigfoot, the report went to the B.F.R.O. and the case file was created for this sighting by Holly. Holly explains in detail about her encounter to the HPI team. I attempt to communicate with Bigfoot by pounding a branch against a tree three times. Bigfoot is known to communicate by hitting wood on wood. I would hit the tree three times and waited for a response. At one time, I heard one hit upon a tree. I attempted this communication again and looked for intelligent responses. If I hit the tree 3 times with a branch, the Bigfoot should respond with 3 hits to a tree. Then I would go down to two and wait for 2 responses and so on and so on. With only one hit to the tree, this form of communication was inconclusive. Bryan and I, did hear 3 pebbles falling into the creek. This could have been an animal knocking over rocks into the creek, there were no more sounds of pebbles, which continued to make this attempt with communicating with Bigfoot inconclusive. Robin claimed that when I was hitting the trees, a tapping on the car was heard as she sat in the car. Angel and I looked for any evidence of her car being touched and we could find no evidence of this.

Sixth Stop/Buckhorn Bar: Also known as 'knuckie buckie' because of the fights that would occur in this bar and also known as -uckhorn Bar, changing the first letter into another letter that gives the bar a new light into seediness and raunchiness. Allan Bar from Central Africa/South Africa is the owner of this bar and he tells me that this bar was at one time the most dangerous bar in Mendocino County, he now has all kinds of security cameras placed around the bar. He let me survey the security cameras and this is what I found. Cam 1: Orb movement. Cam 2: No paranormal activity. Cam 4: Has orb movement, one orb made a 90 degree turn, which could indicate intelligence. Cam 7: 2 large non-moving orbs that stay stationary and they recently appeared and there is no explanation why they are there. As we were going to continue our investigation pass closing time, Allan told us we have to leave, because there were local police parked outside of his establishment. For a small town, there are many local police cars and tribal police around this area. In fact Holly's office is right on top of the local police station, talk about feeling safe at her office!

Seventh Stop/Rice Straw Home of Monelle Riley. This home is reputed to be haunted. I cannot give you the details for the confidentiality request of the occupant. I love this home, it's made of rice straw! Also, outside of this home are real Indian tee pees! I actually went inside one of the tee pees. Orb photographs were captured at this location. EVPs were not gathered due to audio interference, there was a birthday party going on at this home during our investigation. There were too many people around to gather EVP evidence. Holly captures white mist on the roof, I had Holly try and duplicate the shot, but she was unable to. We were later able to determine that the white mist was the cold breath of Holly captured on film. This photograph was debunked by the team.

Eighth Stop/Holly's Photography Office: Her office is reputed to be haunted. She believes this is in part residual due to the history of the land but has also seen the full body apparition of a local who recently passed and used to work in the same building. Lights turn on and off on their own accord and this was witnessed by part of the HPI crew on Saturday night and more so Sunday. I sent Michele Stump and Nicole Pollard-Wilburn on a survellaince/reconnaissance mission to survey the open fields at night, because it is rumored that shadow people are seen in these fields. Michele sees 2 large figured shadow people on the balcony and it frightened her so much, she was practically sitting on Nicole's lap. Nicole glimpsed the shadow people from her peripheral vision. Michele also saw small shadow people figures running across the field. Later, Chris and I conducted surveillance on these open fields and we did not see any shadow people. I was glad, I didn't feel like jumping on Chris' lap, nor did he want to jump on my lap! The night before Jenna DeLaughter (Holly's daughter) was confronted by a shadow person between her home and that of a friend‘s house. The two friends live a block apart and decided to meet half way. When Jenna rounded the corner she saw the shadow of what she assumed to be her friend and said, “Hey”

The shadow then crouched to the ground with no response. Jenna thinking it was her girlfriend playing a joke laughed and said, "You know I see you, don‘t you? What the *ell are you doing?!" Before her very eyes, the shadow person disappeared and the real version of her friend appeared coming out of her driveway, not even close to the location of Jenna's sighting of the shadow person. Jenna is frightened from this experience and tells her mother about it. Bridgett reports to Jenna she felt like she was being followed and also that she felt she was walking forever and not getting any where. Chris, Angel and I, attempt to signal UFOs using flashlights and pen laser lights used against the night skies. Unfortunately there was cloud cover and the signaling was terminated. Chris and I, did notice that the pen laser light travels a great distance, because we could see the red dot move on the outside of the cloud. The rest of the investigation was for ghostly activity in Holly's office. After the investigation, Holly briefs us that several years ago cattle mutilations were occurring in this valley. The cattle mutilations have now resided. Cattle mutilations are associated with black helicopters and UFOs. Finally after the investigation was finished, we enjoyed two horror movies. Dead Silence and the true story of the Bell Witch, called An American Haunting. We had a slumber party for the whole investigation group right in Holly's haunted photography office, this was a very enjoyable investigation in which some of the investigators had experiences that may be considered paranormal, while other investigators did not.

Before I close, during the slumber party at Holly's office, there was snore wars! I will not disclose the snorers, but two of the snorers were snoring in harmony, which made everyone in the room wake up and there was bellowing laughter by everyone! Ahhh...snore wars is a fun game! With all of that snoring, it must have scared off any ghosts from Holly's office!

Added Note: Chris and I headed back to Sacramento, while some of the investigators continued to conduct their investigation into Sunday. This Sunday investigation report will be completed by paranormal investigator Donna Reynolds.

A Haunting in Reno and a Stop at Donner Pass

By Paul Dale Roberts, HPI Ghostwriter

Before I get into my preliminary investigation in Reno, I just want to mention that a UK TV Series called 'A Conversation with a Serial Killer' by Two Four Productions actually came to Sacramento/Ione to film us (HPI) for their documentary. Shannon 'Ms. Macabre' McCabe was the guide through Preston Castle and conducted the seance at Vegas in Old Sacramento. I showed the Two Four Productions crew the actual murder sites of Richard Trenton Chase in Sacramento.
Richard was known as the Vampire of Sacramento. We were originally contacted by Two Four Productions, because they read my Leonard Lake/Charles Eng article, then they found my Richard Trenton Chase article and Shannon's story in regard to Haunted Sacramento. The HPI crew that assisted Shannon and I, along with Two Four Productions were: Holly DeLaughter, Jennifer Baca and Chris Grissom. Shannon showed her appreciation to the production crew, by having a barbecue at her home, this is where they discovered I was the former disco king of Sacramento, when Chris Grissom & Shannon pushed me to show my old school talent to the crew, everyone had a good laugh. We finally ended the third day of filming by feasting at Joe's Crab Shack in Old Sacramento. Shannon and the Two Four Productions crew wanted me to make a fool out of myself one last time, so I danced with the Joe's Crab Shack employees. May 21, 2008 is a day I will never forget, because it was our last day with Two Four Productions. In just 3 days, we all felt like family and it was a sad departure. Shannon & I, had to go back to reality, to our real jobs. For 3 days we were in the spotlight, but keep an eye on HPI, because we will be making more news soon!

Shannon wrote an exclusive story on Two Four Productions here:

HPI covers a lot of Northern territory with our investigations. We have gone as far north as Covelo and Mount Shasta. We have now covered the Eastern front with Reno, Nevada, with this latest investigation and as far south as San Jose, with the upcoming Winchester House investigation. Of course, we went to Santa Cruz a few times to investigate the Brookdale Lodge. We are now expanding with upcoming investigations to New Orleans to investigate Voodoo, zombies and ghosts, Mexico to investigate the Chupracabra and Aruba to investigate the phantom blonde haired woman ghost seen along the beach. A ghost that some people believe is the murder victim Natalee Holloway.
This long Memorial Day weekend was pretty exciting. I got a call from a family member to head over to Reno, to take care of some family business. I thought to myself, if I am going to Reno, I remember a Reno paranormal investigator named Debbie Fisher that once contacted me about a haunted private residence. She had found me through my articles. I might as well kill two birds with one stone, so I called Debbie. She said she would make arrangements with the family to have me investigate. I decided to bring my two dogs with me. Pika (Jack Russell Terrier). Pika is a great paranormal investigator and a sensitive.

I also brought along paranormal-investigator-in-training HPI (pronounced Hi-Pee), a Corkie, half Cocker Spaniel & half Yorkshire Terrier. Debbie was bringing her sensitive, paranormal investigating dog, another Jack Russell Terrier named Cindy. So, the team consisted of: Paul Dale Roberts, Debbie Fisher, Pika, HPI & Cindy. What a team!
I meet up with Debbie and Cindy. Debbie briefs me about the family's situation. She tells me the following:
The family consists of a husband and wife and their 2 daughters and 2 sons. The family has witnessed a little girl sitting at the foot of the bed. The girl has been seen several times, sometimes she wears jeans, shorts or overalls. She has brown hair. There is usually a bow in her hair. The little girl seems like an intelligent haunting, because she has waved at one of the daughters and another time she smiled and pointed at the other sister and her friend. She seems to be aware of the family's presence.
Another entity in the home is that of an old lady. She is seen in a nightgown with blue flowers decorated on her nightgown. There is a boy that is seen, that wears overalls and has yellow & blue patches on his overalls.
The last entity is a woman that looks like a hooker, she is known to wear all black, black boots, she has her hair in a pony tail and seems to be seen a lot in the bathroom.
Debbie and I, stopped at Joe Bob's Bar to interview some of the people that live near and around this area, to get some history of the area. There was not enough substantial history to pin point what may have been causing this haunting in this area. We are still working on a historical overview of where this home is situated. We are keeping the home and the family confidential, to protect their privacy.
During the investigation, Pika and Cindy three times started barking frantically at locations of the house, where nothing was seen. Both Pika and Cindy seemed to circle an area where they could see something. HPI was unaware of any unusual disturbances as he seemed content playing with toys around the house. It makes me wonder if Jack Russell Terriers are more 'sensitive' than other dogs. During my investigation, the family, which I will call a high-tech family, because all of the children have their own laptops, the father is very, very knowledgable about computer software and other computer gadgetry was very warm with his generosity with Debbie and I. The dad of the house made sure Debbie and I, had dinner and cooked up steak, brockley and a baked potato for us. He also made sure the dogs were well-fed. On Sunday morning, when I was briefing the family the outcome of my investigation, they had pancakes waiting for Debbie and I. I want to thank this family for their munificent, openhanded unsparing generosity!
During the investigation, the children were in the house watching Family Guy, Boogeyman, Are You There Yet? They were also playing video games like Grand Theft Auto and Guitar Hero. So any EVPs that might be captured, I must make note on what possible background noises may have caused the EVP. Like if I hear a kid is saying 'are you there yet?', that may have been from the movie tract. Checking the EVPs during the time the children were still awake, I discovered there was too much background noise. When the family finally went to sleep, I found possible EVPs that sounded like: 'shhhhhhhh' and 'eh..eh..hey!' But, of course again, this could have been voices from one of the family members and I must dismiss my evidence as inconclusive.
During the late night investigation, there was strange noises being made throughout the house. I cannot determine if this might be the settlement of the foundation or perhaps the noises from some of the pets of this home. The family has a pet guinea pig and some pet rats. Sunday morning when I briefed the family, I was told that other disturbances is when the family has heard a baby crying and a voice saying...'it's okay Lindsay.' They have witnessed objects falling off the shelves and barrels. They have seen doors opening, or heard things fall down and they go into the room to clean up the mess and there is no mess. A lot of times, things get moved around a lot in the bathroom according to one child family member. The weirdest incident according to the father of the house, is when a sugar bowl top flew off the sugar bowl and landed in an empty rat cage. Many strange photographs have been taken inside of the home of fast moving orbs and what may look like ectoplasm.

The only way I can properly investigate this home, is if the whole family was not present. I do believe this house may be haunted, but with various family routines that are conducted in the house, that may cause noise interference, I can only give the home an 'inconclusive findings' rating.
The entities of this home seem to be causing the family no duress and the family seems to be used to the haunting and welcomes the entities as if they are part of the family. This is a very loving family that is proud of a daughter that sings so well, she will probably one day become an American Idol contestant. All of the children are artistically gifted and quite technical savvy, something they picked up from their father and mother. I thank this family for inviting me to their warm, but haunted home.
As I drove back and recollected my thoughts, I looked at my dogs who absolutely enjoyed their adventure. For that long ride home, they enjoyed my kind of music such as Sledgehammer by Peter Gabriel, Electric Avenue by Eddy Grant and That Girl is Poison by Bell Biv Devoe. They might as well get used to my music too.
To end this investigation, I took HPI and Pika to parts of Sierra Nevada where the Donner Party met their terrible fate under snowbound weather conditions. In 1847, 87 California bound settlers got caught up in one of the worst storms in the Sierras. 39 settlers died and 48 survived. To survive, the survivors has to resort to cannibalism. While we were there to do a small investigation, it was raining, snowing and at one point of time hail came down. I tried to get some pictures of any residual activity, but with the weather being this bad in May, my pictures were inconclusive. I had some nice orb pictures that I can explain away as real up close snowflakes. It was time to finish our trek home. This was HPI's first ghosthunting adventure. I will let HPI know, there will be more.

Her Haunted Life: The Ginger Henderson Story

Interview conducted at: Bronco Billy Pizza Palace.
Interviewed by Paul Dale Roberts, HPI General Manager aka The Demon Warrior
/ www.hpiparanormal.net

September 26, 2009, Saturday: Wow! The day is hot and I am headed over to Fremont, where ghosts are in abundance. My tour guide is Ginger Henderson aka Ms. Fremont aka Ms. Dangerous, let's just call her Ms. Dangerous. I will explain to you why she is Ms. Dangerous later; right now let's get into her story.
Note: Ginger and Paul have a pizza and some cokes while the interview commences.

Question: Ginger, thank you for the tour of Fremont and Niles. Especially Niles. The first place you took me was Les Belles Antiques www.lesbellesantiques.blogspot.com I can see why people think this place is haunted. A lot of psychometrics going on there. Antique objects that contain psychic energy. Entities may be attached to certain objects will linger around the items that they are attached to. Norma Carey and Suan Perry have a beautiful antique shop, glad I stopped by! It was a pleasure meeting Andrew Camacho at this shop too. Andrew says he knows of a haunted location in Fremont and will get back with me on this. Anyway, let's talk about you Ginger; you are a very unique lady. Tell me about the Shadow Person that you would frequently see.

Answer: I remember when I was approximately 7-8-9 years old; I would glimpse a figure wearing a long black cape out of the corner of my eye. When I would turn to see this entity directly, the entity would simply vanish. I seem to remember it always being outdoors though, never inside a building. Often times at the end of the street, there he would be, his cape lifting slightly, catching a breeze and then I turn to get a better look and every time, nothing. I hadn't thought about this in a long time…

Question: Ginger thank you for putting me up at the Fremont Frontier Hotel – Room 37. That was so sweet of you. Besides the possible hauntings of this hotel, can you tell me why the Derby Club is reputed to be haunted?

Answer: I worked there bartending the night shift for 2 years, and that meant locking up by myself at 2:30 in the morning. I hated having to go downstairs; it was so creepy down there in the basement. Niles has underground tunnels all through the town (Note: Ginger personally showed me the tunnel), created during Prohibition, that's where the alcohol was funneled through the different bars and kept hidden from the law. Anyway, the Derby Club has an access panel off the staircase leading downstairs into the basement, covered simply by a piece of plywood hanging by a couple of hooks. One night as I was closing up, my girlfriend Eileen was with me, keeping me company until I finished my duties with the money, etc. Right underneath where I was sitting, there was a loud KNOCK, KNOCK which was where the tunnel is located. We both froze and couldn't believe what happened. Eileen is Catholic, she started reciting some religious material and we both got giant goosebumps and got out as fast as we could. The other thing that was witnessed by me and 2 other customers is the ice scoop – the big heavy one that is by the ice machine became a projectile and was thrown about 3 yards. This happened twice in one night, about an hour apart.

Note: I did do a preliminary investigation of this hotel and talked with Maintenance/Supervisor Dirty Dan. He tells me that the main office was built around the 1850s. People claim to hear knockings at their hotel doors and when they open the door, there is no one there. Dirty Dan is quite the character and has worked with 107.7 The Bone. He calls himself the Sheriff of the Fremont Frontier Motel. His vehicle is called the Hagatha or Dirty Dan's Bone Buggy. Dirty Dan says that the deceased former owner's apparition sometimes makes an appearance by looking out the 2nd floor window.

Question: Ginger, you are a tarot card reader. How did you get into tarot card reading?

Answer: I was gifted with my cards from my sister Candy about 25 years ago. Anything and everything that is paranormal, invisible, spiritual, metaphysical, spooky or God-stuff – I have been drawn to as long as I can remember. The older I get, the stronger the pull – or you can call it the calling – becomes. The cards do what they do, I'm just the tool they use to get the message out that needs to be delivered….I have studied the major Arcana for the symbolism they contain, as well as do readings now and then – but not for money- just when they want to come out and play.

Question: You said that silent film stars like Charlie Chaplin would film here in Niles, can you elaborate?

Answer: Niles, California was the first Hollywood, before Hollywood existed. If you go to www.niles.org you will find historical information, but basically Charlie Chaplin's very first films were filmed in Niles, silent movies of course. The Essanay Film Company was where they were produced, and Niles has the Essanay Film Museum, complete with the chair Charlie Chaplin once sat in (I got to sit in that chair) – The museum is also a film theatre, they show old movies there on Saturday nights.

Question: You work as a bartender at The Florence. Why do people say that this place is haunted?

Answer: Probably due to the opening of the tunnel in the dining room floor, it's like this black hole of energy from the moonshine; it sucks the energy right out of you. And also the vibrations from the loud music makes the tequila bottles jump off the shelf in one spot, I used to think it was ghostly but we debunked that one. I don't doubt that there is a lot of residual haunting activity going on.

Question: What was that odd golden metallic cup you showed me? Where did you get it and what kind of writing is on it?

Answer: I have called it either my Holy Grail aka The Mystery of The Bronze Chalice. I bought it at a second hand store about 5 or 6 years ago for one dime. It was black with tarnish and I was severely scolded by one appraiser I had take a look at it. I found out that was a big no-no as it may have provided a clue as to how old it is. I took it to Clar's auction house in Oakland, and also had 3 linguistic professors at UC Berkeley look at it, and so far no one has been able to tell me anything about it. I think it's time to ask a museum for assistance. From my own research on the web, I've seen a couple of characters that appear on the Egyptian Book of the Dead and another character or two that looks like something from the Dead Sea Scrolls. I'm dying to know what the heck it says…..

Question: The dog grooming studio that you showed me is reputed to be haunted. What was the dog grooming studio before and what is the ghost story about this place?

Answer: It was a bar, and after that it was the Second Hand Store – where I got the Holy Grail in fact! The former owners told me there was a lot of activity, seeing people in the windows and they would hear voices. Once when I was shopping in there an old picture postcard of a person's portrait floated down from the ceiling – out of thin air - it dropped to the floor in front of me. The owner saw this happen too.

Question: Tell me something about your life? The readers would love to know everything about you!

ANSWER: Wow! Where do I start? I was born on 08-24-1961, and have been drawn to the "invisi-world" as long as I can remember, anything and everything spiritual, spooky, God-stuff, metaphysical, etc. The older I get the stronger the pull – this feeling of a higher calling becomes stronger. I knew at the age of 9 that God is real because of a very special prayer that he answered for me almost immediately. Ever since then, we (me and God) have been talking every single day. I would hope as I get older I get better at listening to Him. I laugh because I say I'm possessed by God-I truly have no choice.

Question: Ms. Fremont…please tell me about the haunted house you lived in. What kind of activity did you have in this house?

Answer: The house address was 371 – in numerology that adds up to "11" a master number. The house before THAT one where I lived for 6 years was 36110 – another "11" house. Anyway, the house in Niles had a lot of poltergeist activity, as well as electronic device spontaneous noise-making and turning on at strange times. The front door was heard opening with its distinctive squeak, but the door was locked. A large yellow pages phone book was knocked out of my girlfriend's hands and onto the floor as I passed it to her. A CD went flying across the room and bounced off the wall just as I said to my friend "I should be playing a cd". Someone told me that the house had quite a few different entities living there and that they "liked my energy" so they didn't want me to leave.

Question: Now I will tell you why Ginger is so dangerous. You were saying you are klutzy. When I walked in your home, you poured root beer on me..LOL!!

A: That's not a question….

Question: Give us a sample of your poetry.

A: Look inside ye seeker of mine
Love is all I have to give
Now you know just why I live
Relax sweet child
Relax
Let it flow
In you
Through you
Then let it go
Thoughts, intentions, words and such
Manifests your energy
So heal others with your touch
Write a poem
Send a spell
On others motives
Don't you dwell
Protection around
Lovingly surround
Forces abound
Shhhh don't make a sound

Question: What are your hobbies and recreational activities?

Answer: Tile mosaic, riding my big dyno glide beach cruiser, handyman stuff – I love my tools – gardening, reading, writing.

Question: What TV shows, movies, books do you like?

Answer: I've grown to where I just read non-fiction anymore. Back again though to metaphysics, am uncontrollably drawn to the works of those before who have written of God, spirits, and ancient sciences like the tarot, astrology, numerology. I see it like "tools in the toolbox" – different ones for different jobs, and not every tool fits in everyone's hand. Some work better than others, depending who is using it, and for what reason.

Question: Also, when you do your poetry, has anyone told you that you sound like a cute female rapper? (Note: She sort of sounds like Deborah Harry of Blondie)

Answer: Actually not that many people ever hear my poetry, but they always rhyme. That's another quirky thing for me...my poems have to rhyme!'' (Note: I believe she is saying that her poems always rhyme unintentionally).

Question: If someone wanted to contact you, how can they get in touch with you?
creativeverything@yahoo.com, or
Destiny_22@gmail.com

Here is my website:
http://www.geocities.com/creativeverything/

Note: Ginger Henderson aka Ms. Dangerous is dangerous in another way. It appears that she has the power to affect electrical devices when she is stressed, excited or angry. Example today, she had 8 questions left on the interview, but she was rushing to get the answers done, so she can head to work at The Florence. She completed the answers, saved it. When she reopened the document, after I saw that the answers were saved, the answers somehow mysteriously disappeared. Ginger was not surprised, this has happened to her before.

Special Note: During my adventure with Ginger, I discovered that Ginger is a local celebrity here in Fremont and Niles. Everyone knows Ginger and everyone on the street greets Ginger. I met some of her friends like Alex Maagdenberg. Alex had imaginary friends in Utrecht, Amsterdam and as soon as he came to the United States his imaginary friends disappeared. Ginger introduced me to Sugar Martini of the Billy Martini Show. Sugar is one of the dancers of this musical 70s band. www.billymartini.com Email: sugar@billymartini.com Sugar had her own paranormal experience; she lived in a home in Lafayette that was reputed to be haunted. Lights would constantly turn off and on at this home, she believed a child's ghost haunted this home and things would happen in a locked room, such as objects moving around and no one was in this locked room to move the objects around. I really enjoyed meeting Ginger's friends and seeing the haunted sites of Fremont/Niles. The Florence where Ginger is a bartender is frequented by many biker clubs, such as the Hell's Angels, Henchmen, Skeleton Crew, Mofo Men, Freedom Riders, Korrupt Inc., and Saints and Sinners. One of the patrons told me that the Niles Ghost haunts the foothills; he was a hitchhiker that was accidentally run over by a car, now his restless soul wanders the surrounding hills of Fremont and Niles. This is the end of Ginger's story for now.

A Haunting in Modesto

By Paul Dale Roberts, HPI General Manager/Ghostwriter/Paranormal Investigator

Date: Saturday, June 6, 2009. Busy day today, I have a preliminary investigation in Modesto, the home of George Lucas – Creator of American Graffiti and Star Wars. Modesto has infamous history, such as the notorious murder case of beautiful Laci Peterson. For more information on this case, see this link:

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Laci_Peterson

On this day, I will actually go to the Scott & Laci Peterson home. Rumor has it that the new owners are complaining about paranormal activity that is occurring in the home. Of course, this is only rumor by some Modesto natives.

One of my paranormal investigators Christina George tags along with me to Modesto for the preliminary. When we arrive to Modesto, I find a lovely modest home in the suburbs, owned by Jennifer Barragan and Brandon Babcock. Jennifer and Brandon have an interesting story to tell. They moved into this home one month ago and in the garage they found writing on the wall, it reads: "Watch out for ghosts and big axx widows!" This was sort of a red flag, that this house may have an unusual history, a haunting history.

I learn from Jennifer that the original owner lived in this house from 1969 to 2004. The owner died in this home in the back bedroom. When Jennifer and Brandon moved into this home, they had the following experiences:

1. Plates flew off shelves and one dinner plate flew about 20 feet.
2. Water in the bathroom came on at low pressure. This happened at 2am. Jennifer went to turn it off and when she went back to her bed, the water came on, this time full pressure. When she shut it off again, she yelled “stop it” and it stopped completely.

3. Jennifer’s dogs will not go to the fireplace (inside of the fireplace or outside of the fireplace).
4. Jennifer opened the attic and her dogs freaked out and almost knocked her off the ladder.
5. Jennifer’s youngest son became violent and moody for no apparent reason.
6. Jennifer feels an uneasiness when she nears the shed in the backyard.
7. Jennifer and Brandon find a Bible hidden inside of the garage wall. Note: Was this Bible being used as a deterrent for an unseen force?
8. Dogs will for no reason start barking towards the fireplace, one dog will act like its being attacked.
9. A man delivering pizza to the home told Jennifer and Brandon that the previous owner was working on his car and the car fell on top of him. He survived this ordeal. Shortly after the car falling on the previous owner, the previous owner with his family moved out in the middle of the night.
10. Jennifer has done her own investigation of the home using a digital camera and has taken ‘blizzard orbs’ (a multitude of orbs that give off a blizzard appearance) and classic designer orbs with intricate designs.
11. Jennifer’s two sons heard strange odd sounds late at night that sounded either like a garbage disposal or cat’s fighting, when they went out to see where the sound was coming from, they discovered nothing that could be causing the noises.

During my interview with Jennifer and Brandon, I had my HPI paranormal investigator Christina George doing EVP work and taking digital photos of various areas of the house. Christina George was unable to get any EVPs due to noise interference from outside.

To see pictures of this preliminary daytime investigation, go to this link:
https://s459.photobucket.com/albums/qq319/HPI_International/Modesto/

To see Christina George’s write-up on this preliminary investigation, go here:
http://forums.jazmaonline.com/topic.asp?TOPIC_ID=1108

I will be going back to the Modesto house, because there were certain areas of this home that I felt queasy. I am not psychic, but for some reason I felt queasy in the back yard shed area and the garage area. Christina George went into the backyard shed and she felt something grab her arm. When she came out of the shed, her arm was all red. Yes, an investigation of this home is warranted.

Now, I want to talk about why are people afraid of ghosts?

Why are people afraid of ghosts? The majority of the investigations I have been on have been Casper hauntings. The home is usually inhabited with friendly spooks. Maybe the spook of the house will move the coffee mug from one end of the table to the other end. Is that something to be scared of? I don’t think so, but you will see the occupants of the house in a frazzle, because the coffee mug moved. When I was stationed in Ft. Knox, Kentucky, I remember going to Louisville and seeing the KKK (Ku Klux Klan) alongside the road handing out flyers. The KKK wear white robes because in the end days of the Civil War, they were pretending to be the ghosts of dead Confederate soldiers. The KKK brought out the fear factor by impersonating ghosts. How absolutely ridiculous this was, but yet it worked and to the present day, they still wear white robes. Ghosts are not something we need to worry about. We need to worry about darker forces. A dark force would be some practices of Voodoo. Some modern practices of Voodoo are non-threatening and you can say the more Earthly Voodoo ceremonies are misunderstood and misinterpreted.

The reason why good Voodoo is misinterpreted is because Voodoo had a darker side. The Voodoo I am referring to is when certain drugs are administered to a person, placing that person in a zombie state. Tetrodotoxin from the Puffer fish is used as a deadly powder to administer the zombie transformation. It is said that a second powder composed of dissociatives such as datra is also used. Debbie Daquisto who lived in Trinidad told me that the pop singer Billy Ocean was involved with Obeah (a form of Voodoo) and when he created his song Caribbean Queen, he discovered something unusual in his lyrics. When the lyrics said: "Ah she said I was the tiger she wanted to tame" there was strange devil laughter afterwards. Debbie makes claim that Billy told her that he did not understand where this strange laughter originated from and was quite surprised after he heard the final take of his hit song. Debbie felt that Caribbean Queen was also the incarnation of Trinidad's Voodoo Queen, but could not substantiante that information from Billy.

Did Billy Ocean conjure up a demonic force by dabbling in Obeah? I guess only Billy will know the true answer. Is Voodoo bad? Well..you tell me…..if you stick needles in a doll and a person experiences pain from that curse, I would say it's bad. If a person is administered a drug without their knowledge and becomes a zombie slave, I would think that is bad. If a Voodoo practicioner summons demonic forces for their own self-gratification, I would say that is bad. So, when it comes to what we should be afraid of, I would think dabbling with the dark arts would be a whole lot scarier that the ghost of Granny Smith who likes to open up the back sliding door. That's my food for thought.

Preliminary Interview with Devon Lemmenes:
I conducted a preliminary interview with Devon Lemmenes. On Friday, June 19, 2009, my HPI investigative team will be investigating her home for paranormal activity. In my preliminary interview I learn that her home is possibly occupied with 4 entities. There is the 'Garage Man' that has caused items to fly off shelves. He has even caused nailed down garage items to fly off the walls. Devon thinks that Sam Bradley (councilman) and Mary Bradley (his wife) haunt her home. Both Sam & Mary died in her home. A psychic once told her that an entity named Evelyn that somehow participated in WWII haunts her home. Could Evelyn have been a Rosie the Riveteer? Devon acquired an EVP from her home and it is a man's whispery voice saying her name..Devon.

One more thing, before I sign off. Fort Atkinson, WI Paranormal Society, which is an HPI family member, did an investigation at the Ashmore Estates. Read their report here:
